For Railway Commissioner—NILS. P. HAUGEN, of Pierce.

For Commissioner of Insurance—PHIL. L. SPOONER, of Dane.

The members of the Illinois legislature are to meet informally in Chicago next Saturday to take action concerning the funeral of President Garfield.

Of course the Democrats will do a good deal of blowing next week in Milwaukee. They will go through the form of nominating a ticket, will pretend to push the campaign, but in November they will take to the woods.

St. Louis seems determined to keep its hold upon the heat and save its coal. The thermometer has been ranging there only one degree less than at Galveston, and only three degrees less than the warmest point of observation in the whole country.

A test case is being tried to decide the legality of the sheriff's sale of the goods of W. B. Harwood, a well known Minneapolis bankrupt. Ten lawyers appear on one side, and seven on the other. The jury and the creditors certainly merit sympathy.

The Democrats called their convention one week later than the Republicans that they might profit by the "blunders" of the latter. They can't find the blunders, they are lost for an issue, candidates are scarce, and the convention is an elephant on the ice hands.

Andrew E. Elmore used to be considered an old Democratic stager, but on Wednesday he took his seat in the Republican State convention as a delegate. He is done with the Democratic party, and now proposes to make an open confession of political faith.

The Madison Democrat is wise in its youth—sometimes. It still advises the Democrats to keep out of the field. It makes no material difference to the Republicans whether the Democrats nominate a ticket or not. General Rusk and the entire ticket will go in by a big majority.

The Republican State convention of Massachusetts, was very short and sweet. Governor Long and the entire State ticket was renominated by acclamation, the motion being carried amid great enthusiasm. The only difference of opinion arising in the whole proceedings was on the admission of Mrs. Livermore, the female suffrage advocate, to a seat as delegate, who was admitted.

The Chicago Journal gives the Republican candidate for Governor the following notice: "General Rusk is neither a scholar nor an orator, never having seen the inside of a college in his life, except as a visitor; but he is a person of great practical business ability, a man of affairs, of strong common sense, self-reliant and aggressive, and never turns his back on a friend or an enemy. He has in him all the elements of popularity with the common people, being an old soldier and a farmer, and will carry the State by a rousing majority."

In Chicago a portrait of Guitau was nailed to a wall in a prominent place near the Board of Trade, and a sign tacked up "spit on him." Almost every passer-by made the portrait a target, and this novel spittoon was in the course of an hour or two almost hidden in tobacco juice and dirty quids. Such an expression of the feeling of righteous wrath against the assassin, has no element of refinement in it, and does no sort of practical good, but it indicates plainly that the public indignation is so intense that it must find vent, even though the vent be a coarse one.

There should be a liberal giving to those sufferers by the Michigan fires, not only because they need it, and merit it, though that is reason enough, but because giving is an educative and developing element in society. Sympathy which finds expression only in words is stunted and dwarfed. The heart needs to thro through the pocketbook in order to have a healthy bent. Such opportunities as these are grand chances to not only show the nobility of a nation, and the brotherhood of the American people, but is a grand means for developing that very nobility and brotherhood.

We think the Gazette's estimate of President Arthur printed the day after the death of Garfield will prove to have been a just one. He is a man of many accomplishments, of good judgment, and of broad common sense, and we venture that there will be no foolishness about his administration. He did a graceful thing on Thursday when he invited the several members of his cabinet to retain their respective portfolios. How long they will be retained is not definitely known, but the action of the President shows that he does not desire to make any radical changes. It had been generally supposed that Secretary Blaine would go out, and he may, if not at present, but the indications are that President Arthur will try to run the administration with Blaine in it. The two are personal friends, and profiting by the terrible events of the last twelve weeks, they may learn to have implicit confidence in each other and join hands in the great work of administering the government. There should be no Conklingism and no Blainism, but it should be "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

There are a great many who will mourn the sudden death of Hon. Sen. Clark. He was a well known character in this State, having come here as far back as 1833. There were many things in Mr. Clark's life which are open to severe criticism. In politics he was one of the most ultra Democrats to be found in the west. On the question of the war his sympathies were completely on the side of the South. He despised the administration of Lincoln, and even Lincoln himself. He had no sort of regard for the soldiers who enlisted in the cause of the Union, and it is said of him that when in the State Senate during the dark days of the war, "he hoped that all who enlisted in Lincoln's crusade would be killed." He may not have meant this, but it showed his deep bitterness toward the Union cause and all those who enlisted to save the country and the flag. He never ceased to express his contempt for the war and for the Union, and hence became detested, in a political way, by the patriotic people of the State. While hundreds of thousands were fighting to save the country from disunion and thousands sacrificing their lives that the government might live, he laughed at their calamity and cheered the course of the South. But behind all this there were some good traits in his character. He was large hearted in many things, sociable and exceedingly pleasant, and did many kindly acts.

THE WORK OF THE CONVENTION.

There is a growing impression among the Republicans that the State convention did its work well, and that for this reason there will be a united party and a full vote. The entire party of the State will rally around the man who made his way from a stage-driver to a Congressman, and the other nominees being well known and honored public men, will add a strength to the ticket which can not be overcome by any ticket the Democrats can make or any work they can do. The Democrats have been indulging in the hope that the Republican convention would make blunders on account of the multiplicity of candidates, but weeks ago, and at several times, the Gazette notified the Democrats that the Republican State convention would not blunder, nor fritter away any advantages they had over the Democrats. The prophecy of the Gazette has been fulfilled, and there is given to the people one of the strongest tickets the party could make. There will be no lukewarmness in the party during the campaign, and while there may be some disappointment among those who are defeated for positions on the ticket, there will be no wounds to heal.

A great many of our Norwegian friends will probably feel disappointed that Colonel Johnson and Secretary Warner were defeated in the convention. Both are especially strong men because of their high personal integrity and well known abilities. But it was thought best to give that nationality the Railway Commissioner, ship, and Mr. Haugen was the successful candidate. It is a very important and responsible office, and the selection of Mr. Haugen for the place is an honor to that gentleman. He is a young man of good education, and in 1874 graduated from the law department of the Michigan University; and the State Journal says, "the people will find in Mr. Haugen, a faithful protector of their rights against the encroachments of all corporations."

There was a general disposition to give the farmers a position on the ticket, and the name of Hiram Smith was in the mind of the convention. But N. C. Farnsworth, of Sheboygan, presented the name of Mr. Smith for Governor, and his remarks regarding the other candidates were exceedingly out of place, and altogether unjust. In fact they were libelous, and intently wicked. This very much weakened Mr. Smith's chances for any place on the ticket, and finally he dropped out of sight. His cause and that of the farmers, should have been represented by a more fitting man than N. C. Farnsworth.

The Gazette prints to-day the platform adopted by the convention, and those who want to know just what the creed of the Republican party is are invited to give the platform a careful reading.

The resolutions of condolence and sympathy with the family of the Martyr President are exceedingly appropriate, and the cordial expression of good will to President Arthur is timely and in good spirit.

The platform is square—footed on the tariff question, and pronounced in favor of protecting American labor; it opposes any further grants to railway or other corporations; declares that polygamy should die; it opposes any further tinkering with the finances; recommends a change in the system of electing Presidents and wants specific laws defining the constitutional term "inability of the President."

GARFIELD.

Special to the Gazette.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The floral representation of an angel which was placed over the catafalque was soon taken down as unsatisfactory. The coffin remained closed. Thousands of people are still filing by.

Mrs. Garfield will remain quietly at Attorney General MacVeach's until the funeral services commence at 2 o'clock. The procession starts at 3. The train leaves at 5 for Cleveland. Another examination of the body will be made before starting.

AN EXTRA SESSION.

Special to the Gazette.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—President Arthur issued a proclamation calling an extra session of the Senate Oct. 10, for executive business.

It is reported that each member of the cabinet formally tendered his resignation, and President Arthur requested them to remain at their posts.

THE ASSASSIN.

Special to the Gazette.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The best legal authorities say that the assassin Garfield must be tried in Washington. New Jersey has no jurisdiction in the case.

TRAIN ROBBERS.

Special to the Gazette.
LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 23.—Three young men, masked, boarded an Iron Mountain train last night near Prescott, and with cocked revolvers, made the conductor stop the train and made the passengers throw up their hands, robbing all the passenger and express messenger. It is variously estimated that the robbers got six to fifty thousand dollars.

LYING IN STATE.

The Remains of the Dead President Viewed by Over 70,000 People Yesterday.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 22.—The remains of President Garfield have lain in state at the Capitol all day. It is estimated that between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m. they were viewed by 70,000 people. The rotunda of the Capitol has been open ever since the coffin was placed upon the catafalque yesterday afternoon. At midnight last night a constant stream of people passed in at the east door, looked upon the features of the dead President, and moved slowly out of the west door of the rotunda. Between 3 a. m. and 7 in the morning there was an interruption in the crowd. Now and then a meekly clad man, apparently having no place to pass the night, would slowly shuffle up to the coffin, glance silently at the disfigured countenance of the dead and pass forth into the darkness outside, like a wretched spirit. There were a few belated souls who wound up a night's orgy by a visit to the Capitol. With unsteady step they moved over the stone floors to the side of the coffin and gazed unsteadily upon the dead man's face. Upon these men the sight seemed to have the effect of a shower bath, and, straightening up, they could walk out of the Capitol as coolly as the troops who patrolled the hall.

At daybreak, laboring men, with the implements of their trade in hand, looked upon the coffin.

After early breakfast the rash began and continued all day. The sun poured down with its relentless heat, but it could not disperse those thousands who had gathered to pay the last token of respect to the dead.

The line formed outside the Capitol was fully a mile long. It began at the junction of East Capitol street with the Capitol grounds, passed west through the main driveway to the concrete boulevard directly in front of the building, swung southerly to the Senate wing, turned sharply to the north again, moved up to the statue of Washington, which stands in front of the rotunda, made a broad curve, moved southerly again to the Senate front, and swung sharply once more to the north and then up the steps and into the Capitol. This procession resembled a huge serpent, with its head on the Capitol stairs and its tail stretched out beyond the long folds of the body to East Capitol street. The line arranged itself in this fashion to keep within the limits of the Capitol grounds. Had it been stretched out in a straight line, it would have extended at least half a mile east of the Capitol. The people in some parts of the line were four abreast, in others two abreast. They moved at an ordinary pace. There were men, women, and children, black and white, of all ages and conditions. The city's well-to-do side by side with the Virginia negroes. Finely-dressed ladies did not disdain to march by the side of worn-out old men in rags. The majority of the people in line were from the country. Every train that arrived from the South, West, and East was crowded, and specials were run from interior points. The procession was orderly. There was no pushing or other disturbance. When the practice leading to the rotunda was reached every man and boy in line lifted his hat. At the catafalque the members of the guard of honor assisted the people to obtain a good view of the dead President, and preserve order.

The features of the dead are even more restful in appearance than yesterday. Decomposition, which set in soon after the autopsy was performed, was not prevented by the embalming. A liberal sprinkling of powder over the face this morning could not conceal the marks of decomposition. The face was of a dusky hue, sprinkled with black and yellow spots. The bright color prevented the escape of disagreeable odors. At 6 o'clock this evening the casket was closed by the undertakers. This action met with general approval. No one would have been able to recognize the features of General Garfield living in the hued features of the dead.

There was no abatement in the crowd, however. They pressed in by the thousands, as eager to gaze upon the coffin as they had previously been to look upon the face of the dead. Floral decorations were scattered about the coffin and placed upon the floor of the rotunda. On the foot of the coffin rested an immense wreath of white rose-buds. Attached to it was a card bearing the following inscription:

Queen Victoria to the memory of the late President Garfield, an expression of her sorrow and sympathy with Mrs. Garfield and the American Nation.

The wreath was placed upon the casket by Mr. Hitt, assistant secretary of state. It was prepared by telegraphic direction of the Queen at the British Legation.

THE AUTOPSY CRITICISED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Since the arrival of the Presidential party from Long Branch reports uncomplimentary to the surgeons in connection with the autopsy upon the remains of the dead Executive have gained currency. It is now said, upon the authority of one of the physicians present, that the examination was entirely inadequate; that little effort was made to learn the truth, and that the published report was not exactly in accordance with the facts. Indeed, the gentleman states that the post-mortem examination was an unscientific botch.

A man was taken from Washington—a subordinate of the Surgeon General, and he was found to be thoroughly incompetent to the task. Dr. Boynton made an effort to have two or three professional pathologists employed, but he was overruled. The first thing that he did in opening the abdominal cavity was to break into the abscess near the liver, and over a pint, probably, of pus was thus allowed to escape and run over the intestines and organs, that should have been examined without such an inconvenience. There was no scale for weighing the liver, lungs, etc., as it was found the one used would not balance nearer than a pound. A scorch lasting an hour and a half was made in the groin for the bullet, and all hope of finding it was abandoned.

Dr. Agnew became disgusted at length and took the knife himself. Finally, when every part of the body had been examined, it was thought that the bullet could have lodged, there remained the intestines, which, with the stomach, had been removed and lay in a bowl. An examination of the viscera was begun, and almost at once a hard lump was discovered encased in a pocket attached to the stomach. It was tied up and cut open, and found to the surprise of all to contain the fatal bullet.

The physician, who vouches for the story, declares that regarding the bullet thus found under such circumstances, no one can tell where it lodged or in what region it lay before the intestine was removed. The examination of the liver was very slight, and Dr. Bliss objected to any inspection of the lungs at all, until Dr. Agnew and Boynton insisted upon it, and then it was very hasty. No thorough inspection was made of the intestines, and the physicians cannot state their condition. When it came to the writing of the published report, Dr. Bliss insisted that no mention be made of anything that looked like a pyrexia, and only after Attorney General MacVeach and Drs. Agnew and Boynton insisted upon it, was the reference made to blood poison in any form.

An old lady writes us: "I am 65 years old and was feeble and nervous all the time, when I bought a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic. I have used a little more than one bottle and feel as well as at 30, and am sure that hundreds need just such a medicine. See advertisement."

THE BULLET.

The Fatal Bullet in the Hands of Secretary Brown.

WASHINGTON, September 22.—The bullet cut from President Garfield's body at the autopsy was given Dr. Bliss, who immediately handed it over to Private Secretary Brown, who carefully wrapped the ball and sealed the package, and will preserve it till such time as it may be needed in evidence at the trial of Guitau. The fractured vertebra is now in the hands of a scientific gentleman, who is preparing it for exhibition at the National Medical Museum in this city.

FASTING AND PRAYER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 22.—The following proclamation has just been issued by President Arthur:

By the President of the United States of America:

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, In His inscrutable wisdom He has pleased God to remove from us the illustrious head of the Nation, JAMES A. GARFIELD, the late President of the United States; and

WHEREAS, It is fitting that the deep grief which fills all hearts should manifest itself with one accord toward the throne of Infinite Grace, and that we should bow before the Almighty and seek from Him that consolation in our affliction and that sanctification of our loss which He is able and willing to vouchsafe.

Now, therefore, in obedience to the sacred duty, and in accordance with the desire of the people, I, CHESTER A. ARTHUR, President of the United States of America, do hereby appoint Monday next, the 25th day of September, on which day the remains of our honored and beloved dead will be consigned to their last resting place on earth, to be observed throughout the United States as a day of humiliation and mourning, and I earnestly recommend all people to assemble on that day in their respective places of divine worship, there to render alike their tribute of sorrowful submission to the will of Almighty God, and to their reverence and love for the memory and character of our late chief magistrate.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington, on the twenty-second day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and sixth.

(Signed) CHESTER A. ARTHUR, President.

(Seal) JAMES G. BLAINE, Secretary of State.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

The committee of the city council appointed to confer with citizens and arrange for appropriate services on Monday next, the day of President Garfield's funeral, met last evening at Doe & Hyzer's law office.

A number of citizens were present and the meeting was organized by the choosing of Dr. Henry Palmer chairman, and E. M. Hyzer secretary.

It was decided that the services should be held in the court house park at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of that day, and the following committees were appointed to arrange for the same.

On invitations—C. B. Conrad, Col. W. B. Britton.

On music—Prof. C. G. Titcomb, Dr. M. A. Newman, and Dr. J. W. St. John.

On chaplain and orators—Dr. Henry Palmer, Dr. O. P. Robinson, and E. M. Hyzer.

On decorations—Dr. Thor Judd, T. T. Croft, R. P. Young, James Fitzgibbon, Otto Holm.

Col. W. B. Britton was chosen marshal and empowered to name his own aids.

It is expected that the military and the civic societies will turn out and a procession will be formed, which will march to the court house park. The bells of the city will be tolled for an hour, all the places of business and offices will be closed, and it is expected that all citizens will willingly aid the committees in making the observance a general one, and one befitting the sad event.

Wm. McCarty, 88 Lloyd Street, Buffalo, N. Y., fell and sprained his ankle. His employer, H. Anderson, 84 Main street, procured some Thomas' Electric Oil, and he says that a few applications enabled him to go to work as usual.

TAKING THE OATH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 22.—President Arthur has just taken the oath of office in the marble room at the capitol, in the presence of the members of the cabinet, the justices of the supreme court, a few senators and member of the House of Representatives—all who could be notified this morning in time to be present. There were present, also, General Sherman, General Grant, Rear Admiral Nichols, Hon. Hannibal Hamlin, General Boole, and a few others. This step was taken after a conference between the President, Secretary Blaine, and the Attorney General. Very few persons knew that the oath was to be administered until the ceremony was over. The President and members of the cabinet assembled in the marble room at 12 o'clock. Chief Justice Waite, in his full robes of office, accompanied by the Associate Justices, proceeded from the Supreme Court room to the marble room. The doors were immediately closed, and without any formality, President Arthur arose, and standing up on one side of the center table, with Chief Justice Waite on the other, took the oath of office.

The President's manner was calm and composed, and his response, "so help me, God," was in a firm tone and without a tremor. The President then read from manuscript notes the following:

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

For the fourth time in the history of the Republic, its Chief Magistrate has been removed by grief. All hearts are filled with grief and horror at the sudden and untimely death of the murdered President, his protracted sufferings, his unyielding fortitude, the example and achievements of his life, and the pathos of his death, will forever illumine the pages of our history.

For the fourth time the officer elected by the people, and ordained by the constitution to fill the vacancy so created, is called to assume the executive chair. The wisdom of our fathers, foreseeing even the most dire possibilities, made sure that the government should never be imperiled because of the uncertainty of human life. No higher or more assuring proof could exist of the strength and permanency of popular government than the fact that those chosen to fill the place of a fallen chief, his constitutional successor is peacefully installed without shock or strain except the sorrow which mourns the bereavement. All the noble aspirations of my lamented predecessor, which found expression in his life; the measures devised and suggested during the brief administration to correct abuses and enforce economy; to advance the prosperity and promote the general welfare; to insure domestic security and maintain friendly and honorable relations with the nations of the earth, will be gathered in the hearts of the people, and it will be my earnest endeavor to profit, and to see that the nation shall profit, by his example and experience. Prosperity blesses the country; our fiscal policy is fixed by law, is well grounded and generally approved. No threatening issue mars our foreign intercourse, and the wisdom, integrity and thrift of our people may be trusted to continue undisturbed the peace and order of peace, fraternity and welfare. The gloom and anxiety which have enshrouded the country must make repose especially welcome now. No demand for speedy legislation has been heard; no adequate occasion is apparent for an unusual session of Congress. The constitution defines the functions and powers of the executive as clearly as those of either of the other departments of the government, and he must answer for the just exercise of the discretion it permits, and the performance of the duties it imposes. Summoned to these high duties and responsibilities, and profoundly conscious of their magnitude and gravity, I assume the trust imposed by the constitution, relying for aid on Divine guidance, and the virtue, patriotism and intelligence of the American people.

Worthless Star.

Not so fast, my friend; if you could see the strong, healthy, happy-looking women and children that have been raised from beds of sickness, suffering and almost death, by the use of Hop Bitters, you would say "Glorious and invaluable remedy." See another column.

Republican Platform.

The following is the Platform adopted by the Republican State Convention at Madison:

Resolved, That first among the subjects that press themselves upon the attention of the nation at this time is the overwhelming majority of the people of this country who feel the loss not only of a great and noble leader, but of a noble man in all the relations of life. As no words can fully express the sorrow of the people at this sad event, or add to the fame or honor of the beloved dead, we content ourselves with the assurance to his bereaved family of our deepest sympathy and most tender regard.

Resolved, That in the manifestations from all sections of the country of universal grief for the death of the President, as well as in sympathy with his suffering family, we recognize the existence of a common brotherhood and bond of national affection, and we hail the manifestation of this spirit as the harbinger of a brighter time, of kindlier feelings, and greater charity and tolerance in the politics of the Republic.

Resolved, That in the expressions of interest in and sorrow for our great national affliction by rulers and people of other nations, we recognize not only the expression of natural humanity and natural courtesy, but the special respect and regard in which our country and government is held by all civilized nations and peoples of the world, and which calls for the deepest gratitude on the part of our whole people.

Resolved, That to President Chester A. Arthur, called upon as he is under the most delicate and trying circumstances to assume the responsible duties of chief magistrate of our country, we express our cordial good will, and earnest desire for the success of his administration. With confidence in his judgment, integrity and efficient discharge of official duty, and with a dignified conduct of the national government.

Resolved, That we affirm our belief in and attachment to all the great principles upon which the Republic is founded, and for which it has during its history contended. We reaffirm the principles laid down in the Declaration of Independence, and we believe that the constitution of the United States is the supreme law and not a mere contract between the States, and that the duties of all citizens are to support the constitution and to obey the laws made in pursuance of its provisions.

Resolved, That we believe in the right of every citizen to participate in the government, and that no man should be denied the right to vote on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

Resolved, That we believe in the right of every citizen to participate in the government, and that no man should be denied the right to vote on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.
